FILMFESTDC.ORG • COME SEE GREAT MOVIES!
Welcome to the 29th annual Washington, DC International Film Festival. Come see great movies!

The world of international cinema is similar to the worlds of fine cuisine, accomplished literature, and music. It challenges our assumptions and takes us down roads we didn’t even know existed. Unlike commercial Hollywood fare, which is driven primarily by star recognition and special effects, international cinema focuses on relationships, character depth, and story. Restricting our movie-going to whatever is showing at the nearest multiplex is similar to listening only to Top 20 music, reading only from best-seller lists, or dining out only at McDonald’s. We would be missing some of life’s more interesting and rewarding experiences.

We have made a few upgrades to this year’s event. There are now primarily two venues with multiple festival screens in each venue, which makes it more convenient for our patrons. New pass options make it more cost-effective to see festival offerings. Rhythms On and Off the Screen will couple film screenings with live musical performances. We hope to make the festival fun!

Filmfest DC would not be possible without our generous sponsors. Our Board of Directors, staff, and hundreds of volunteers continue to provide a strong infrastructure for our organization. We owe a great deal of thanks to the many dedicated people who have shared their time and talents with our event. I especially want to welcome our guests from around the world and to thank the distributors who have made films available to us. They are the lifeblood of our festival.

Filmfest DC is an opportunity to explore and discover. It is an adventure, and we invite you to enjoy the festival and all of its pleasures. We are very pleased to bid you welcome.

OPENING NIGHT

TANGO GLORIES
Oliver Kolker, Hernán Findling
Argentina, 2014, 117 minutes, color

The Washington, DC International Film Festival is pleased to present Tango Glories as its 29th Opening Night film. Featuring dazzling musical and dance performances and an extraordinarily moving performance from Hector Alterio, the film centers on psychiatrist Ezequiel Kaufman (Gaston Pauls), who has been offered a four-year residency at a prestigious clinic. First he must present a clinical case study, and he finds the perfect one in 85-year-old Fermín Turdera (Alterio), who expresses himself through the lyrics and titles of tango songs. As Ezequiel digs deep into the causes of this unique phenomenon, Fermín reintroduces him to a cultural expression he took for granted. The memory of an almost-forgotten past comes back to life as both men bond over the wonders of tango-era Buenos Aires. Their friendship uncovers long-suppressed, unresolved secrets blended with beautiful, sensual song and dance in which tango is more than just an old ideal—it’s a way of life.

Co-director Oliver Kolker started studying acting in 1994 and began dancing tango in 1997. He became obsessed with the dance, spending time at the milongas and dancing into the wee hours of the morning. Kolker has performed at Tango Fantasy Miami, Chicago Tango Week, Tango Magic Seattle, and Planetango Moscow Russia, among other festivals and showcases.—Various sources

CLOSING NIGHT

I CAN QUIT WHenever I WANT
Sydney Sibilia
Italy, 2014, 101 minutes, color

A candy-colored criminal comedy confection that improbably yet deftly reimagines the “Breaking Bad” dynamic in the halls of Italian academia and nightclubs of Rome, this local box-office smash stars Eduardo Leo as Pietro, a talented, principled, and cash-strapped molecular research scientist who is also something of a milquetoast. When he loses out on a pivotal university appointment and must lie about his income to his increasingly exasperated live-in girlfriend Giulia (Valeria Solarino), Pietro desperately pursues one of many students who owe him tutoring fees to a popular club and has an inadvertent substance-induced epiphany. An obscure Italian law allows new, and thus unclassifiable, drugs in the marketplace. All Pietro has to do is gather together a group of his eccentric, socially challenged, and equally desperate brainiac colleagues, manufacture a synthetic Ecstasy variant, and peddle it in the most popular clubs under the noses of the established local drug lords. What could possibly go wrong? Director and co-scenarist Sydney Sibilia creates and sustains a breakneck comic pace that relies on relatable character comedy and the blinkered blindness of sheer greed to propel a narrative that is at once unpredictable and inevitable. These wolves are far from Wall Street and Pietro is no Walter White, confirming that I Can Quit Whenever I Want breaks bad in its own distinctive way and thus sets just the right tone for a wrap-up celebration at FFDC 2015.—Eddie Cockrell

THE LIGHTER SIDE
Politics Isn’t the Only Funny Thing in Washington!

A good laugh is a universal pastime and Filmfest DC is continuing its popular series of international comedies. Comedies do more than just entertain; they also offer important insights into the central workings of a given culture, from its oldest customs to its most taboo subjects. Humor varies from one culture to the next, and it is impossible to characterize international comedies under one umbrella. Thus, in this series, we explore how international cinema has used humor to better understand the human condition as well as to make fun of our foibles. If the language of cinema is universal, then laughter is our common vocabulary.

Films selected for this year’s The Lighter Side series include:
- The 100-Year-Old Man Who Climbed Out the Window and Disappeared (Sweden)
- Happy Times (Mexico)
- Henri Henri (Canada)
- I Can Quit Whenever I Want (Italy)
- Living Is Easy with Eyes Closed (Spain)
- Love at First Fight (France)
- Me and Earl and the Dying Girl (USA)
- One for the Road (Mexico)

TRUST NO ONE
Espionage, Crime, and Thrillers

Good guys vs. bad guys (or girls)... Will she escape? ... Who done it? ... The heist ... Mystery ... Suspense ... Conspiracy ... Betrayal. It’s probably best to trust no one. Unlike the traditional Hollywood fare driven by loud explosions and endless sequels, our Trust No One focus offers engaging plots in atmospheric locations with fascinating characters who fuel the excitement in Filmfest DC’s selection of international thrillers and crime dramas. This is edge-of-your-seat movie fun.

Films selected for this year’s Trust No One series include:
- 24 Days (France)
- Accused (Netherlands)
- The Clearstream Affair (France)
- The Connection (France)
- Elephant Song (Canada)
- A Hard Day (South Korea)
- In Order of Disappearance (Norway)
- The Lies of the Victor(s) (Germany)
- Partners in Crime (Taiwan)
- The Treatment (Belgium)

REEL JAZZ
Films on Jazz

Performances by some of the worlds most accomplished jazz musicians have been captured in this series of jazz on film. In addition to the music, we learn who these creative giants are as people and what experiences shaped them. It is a rare year when a number of excellent films with this theme are available and the festival is pleased to present them.

Films selected for this year’s Reel Jazz series include:
- Be Known: The Mystery of Kahil El’Zabar (USA)
- Jace (USA)
- Keep On Keepin’ On (USA)
- Rashaan Roland Kirk: The Case of the Three Sided Dream (USA)
- Superior On the Hilton Rooftop (Republic of Trinidad and Tobago)

IMPACT PROJECT

Many independent filmmakers passionately focus on telling stories that spotlight issues of social justice. In recognition of their creators’ commitment to share these important themes with the broadest possible segment of the public, the social justice films in Filmfest DC will be the focus of a special initiative to bring these works to a wider audience in our area.

In addition to the films’ festival screenings, the project includes a series of programs and presentations designed for students and community groups. The Filmfest DC website offers thought-provoking resources about the films and the issues they explore.

This project is conceived and directed by Linda Blackaby, Filmfest DC’s senior programming consultant, and is supported by a grant from the Anonymous Fund of The Philadelphia Foundation.

SISTER CITIES THROUGH THE LENS
Filmfest DC joins the DC Commission on the Arts and Humanities in celebrating Washington’s Sister Cities Program by presenting a series focusing on new films from three international capitals: Paris, Rome, and Seoul. Seen through the lenses of native filmmakers, each of these cities teems with liveliness and urban trends, just like the District of Columbia does. What better way to become familiar with our Sister Cities than from the perspectives of those who live there and observe their dynamic vitality?

Films selected for the Sister Cities Through the Lens series include:
- The Clearstream Affair (Paris, France)
- The Dinner (Rome, Italy)
- I Can Quit Whenever I Want (Rome, Italy)
- A Hard Day (Seoul, South Korea)

THE 100-YEAR-OLD MAN WHO CLIMBED OUT THE WINDOW AND DISAPPEARED
Felix Herngren
Sweden, 2013, 114 minutes, color

Equal parts Bad Grandpa, Forrest Gump, and Zeitgeist, with a dash of Kurt Vonnegut’s Slaughterhouse Five philosophy added for spice, director Felix Herngren’s big-screen adaptation of author Jonas Jonasson’s immensely popular and humorous 2009 novel tells of nomadic explosives expert and centenarian Allan Karlsson (Robert Gustafsson, often called Sweden’s funniest man), who escapes his retirement home and embarks on a globe-spanning adventure. Along the way, he acquires a suitcase full of ill-gotten krona, an elephant named Sonja, various misfit friends, and an affirmation of a life well spent. His crusade is punctuated by flashbacks that place Karlsson at the forefront of pivotal historical events alongside Franco, Truman, A-bomb inventor J. Robert Oppenheimer, and Gorbachev. Life is what you make it, says this beguiling saga. If Allan Karlsson can do it with common sense and a live-and-let-live credo, so can we all.—Eddie Cockrell

1001 GRAMS
Bent Hamer
Norway/Germany/France, 2014, 87 minutes, color

As regimented in her spartan personal life as is the culture of the Norwegian Bureau of Weights and Measures, where she works under her father’s supervision protecting the national kilogram prototype, Marie maintains a dependable routine. But when Dad suffers a serious heart attack, Marie must step in to escort the national kilo, which is housed in two bell jars and a sturdy carrying case, to a conference of the International Bureau of Weights and Measures in France. The break in routine will have life-changing repercussions. Look up the word “deadpan” in the dictionary and you’re likely to find renowned writer-director Bent Hamer’s yearbook picture; his films Factotum (2006) and his most recent, Home for Christmas (2011), have been formidable FFDC hits. Hamer mines the pitfalls and perils of conformity with wry humor and unshakeable humanism. As Variety chief critic Justin Chang so bravely declared, 1001 Grams is “worth the weight.”—Eddie Cockrell

TRUST NO ONE
24 DAYS
Alexandre Arcady
France, 2014, 111 minutes, color

If he’s Jewish, he must be rich, right? That was the ghastly logic behind the 2006 kidnapping in Paris of the 24-year-old cell phone shop clerk Ilan Halimi. For the next three weeks, Halimi is held in a suburban Paris housing block as the police, shockingly, fail to realize the anti-Semitism at the root of the crime—even as Ilan’s non-white parents are bombarded with hate-filled phone calls and e-mails. Of this shocking event, director Alexandre Arcady has made a white-knuckle thriller as admirable for its restraint in the face of fury as it is for its no-holds-barred indictment of systemic failure. “It happened to me and my family,” warns Halimi’s mother Ruth (Zabou Breitman), on whose memoir of events the film is based, “but it could have happened to others.” As long as there are fearless works such as 24 Days, that danger will be minimized.—Eddie Cockrell

THE AMINA PROFILE
Sophie Deraspe
Canada, 2015, 85 minutes, color

Around the turn of the past decade, French-Canadian Sandra Bagaria began corresponding via e-mail from Montreal with an American-Syrian woman, Amina Arraf. Arraf’s blog, “A Gay Girl in Damascus,” gathered heat as quickly as their online courtship did—until the postings stopped, and Bagaria heard Arraf had been taken away by security forces. This prompted an online panic amongst civil libertarians and news outlets (including NPR and The Washington Post), but troubling questions began to arise: just who is Amina Arraf? It’s no secret the Internet is a teeming Wild West of communication platforms, with Twitter feeds, Facebook flame wars, and various hacks and frauds the order of the day. Following up her impressive 2007 debut Missing Victor Pellerin, Quebec native Sophie Deraspe examines the slippery of the online age. The Amina Profile packs a disconcertingly personal wallop.—Eddie Cockrell

ADVANCED STYLE
Lina Plioplyte
USA, 2014, 72 minutes, color

There are so many life lessons and so much inspiration to be gleaned from this delightful documentary about women of a certain age. First-time director Lina Plioplyte teams with fashion writer and photographer Ani Seth Cohen, on whose popular blog of the same name this film is based, to showcase a handful of older women who make living stylishly a point of pride. All of these exquisitely outfitted women flaunt their joie de vivre along the streets of New York and beyond. Because of the blog’s viral popularity, the women become fashion icons in their own right. We follow them on fashion shoots, television programs, and most wondrously in their daily lives, where style is always Topic A. It’s not just a love of clothing these women share, but an attitude toward aging in this youth-obsessed culture. As 95-year-old Zelda Kaplan tells us, “Learn to accept yourself.”—Dave Nuttycombe

BIKES VS. CARS
Fredrik Gertten
Sweden, 2015, 91 minutes, color

Bikes vs. Cars depicts a global crisis we must talk about: climate change, the depletion of the earth’s resources, and cities that are consumed by cars. The bike is a great tool for change, but the various interests whose lifeblood is in cars invest billions each year on lobbying and ads to protect their business. In Sao Paulo, where car sales are booming, bike activists push for radical changes. In Toronto, car-dependent voters elect a mayor who wipes out bike lanes and trams. On the other side of the spectrum—and world—40 percent of Copenhagen’s residents commute by bike daily. Bikes vs. Cars examines the struggle bicyclists face in a society dominated by cars and the revolutionary changes that could take place if more cities moved away from car-centric models. Award-winning director and journalist Fredrik Gertten also helmed Big Boys Gone Bananas! (FFDC 2013).—Various sources

TRUST NO ONE
THE CLEARSTREAM AFFAIR
Vincent Garenq
France/Luxembourg/Belgium, 2013, 110 minutes, color

“It’s crazy,” mutters crusading journalist Denis Robert (Liam Neeson lookalike Gilles Lellouche) as he cruises Luxembourg’s financial district and comes to a stop at the fortress-like Clearstream, which has been described to him by an insider as “a co-operative to handle exchanges.” And it’s about to get crazier: translated, that phrase means Clearstream operates as an off-the-books bank for financial institutions and wealthy individuals, and Robert’s doggedly unrelenting investigative reporting is about to land him in a world of hurt. Based entirely on the real-life Robert and his books that exposed Clearstream’s widespread and far-reaching malfeasance, this perfectly-timed, glossily photographed widescreen procedural thriller globetrots breathtakingly among the perpetrators, victims, and white knights of the saga. Director Vincent Garenq’s The Clearstream Affair is Three Days of the Condor meets The Insider, with a Gallic tang and very real lives in the balance.—Eddie Cockrell

THE CHAMBERMAID
Ingo Haeb
Germany, 2014, 89 minutes, color

Chambermaid Lynn (Vicky Krieps) is incredibly dedicated to her work. She even polishes unused hotel rooms spic and span. Lynn is also orderly in her private life. Her days follow a fixed pattern, with weekly visits to her psychiatrist as the social climax. German director and scriptwriter Ingo Haeb based his film on a novel by Markus Orths. It slowly becomes clear that a world of emotions is hidden behind Lynn’s imperturbable exterior. The chambermaid sometimes hides under the bed in a hotel room and studies the habits of the guests. She becomes fascinated by Chiara, a call girl who specializes in sadism and masochism. Calmly and precisely, Haeb increasingly reveals the color in Lynn’s bare life. The meticulous form, the crystal clear camerawork, and the subtle screenplay make The Chambermaid an impressive character study. It won the Fipresci Award at the Montreal Film Festival.—Rotterdam International Film Festival

CIUDAD DELIRIO
Chus Gutiérrez
Colombia/Spain, 2014, 99 minutes, color

Vivacious Angie (Carolina Ramirez) runs a salsa dance school in Cali, where dancing is a way of life. She’s struggling to get her students into the town’s big salsa competition—while also coping with the man who is both her ex-lover and ex-dance partner. Enter the dashing Javier (Julian Villagran), a shy and retiring doctor who has come to Columbia from Spain to speak at a medical conference. But when night falls, the doctor can’t resist the pulse and power of the nonstop music that fills the city. Angie and Javier meet and dance the night away. Now Angie has two men to worry about, And how will her dancers afford new costumes? The music, emotions, and dance moves become ever more intense as the contest grows near, and director Gutiérrez keeps the camera swooning in time with the furious salsa beat.—Dave Nuttycombe

THE CONNECTION
Cédric Jimenez
France, 2014, 135 minutes, color
We’ve all seen The French Connection, William Friedkin’s masterful 1971 Oscar®-winning film. In Cédric Jimenez’s The Connection, we learn the story from the French point of view. Set in Marseilles in the 1970s and just as gritty as the New York version, The Connection adds a bit of Gallic savoir-faire to the standard police procedural. We follow a no-nonsense magistrate as he tries to take down the sprawling drug empire. Portrayed as a stylish force of nature by the always-telegenic Jean Dujardin, magistrate Pierre Michel is often at odds with his own bureaucracy. Michel must resort to extra-legal tactics to bring ruthless kingpin Gaëtan “Tany” Zampa (a suitably slithery Gilles Lellouche) to justice. Michel’s battles are fought over the course of years, as his home life suffers and Tany keeps slipping from his grasp. A terrific soundtrack perfectly captures the feel of the era perfectly.—Dave Nuttycombe

JUSTICE MATTERS
DUKHTAR
Afia Nathaniel
Pakistan/USA/Norway, 2014, 93 minutes, color
To end a long-standing tribal blood feud between their clans in the volatile Kashmir region of remote rural Pakistan, elderly warlord Tor Gul (Abdullah Jaan) insists he be allowed to marry Zaineb (Saleha Aref), the daughter of Chief Daulat (Asif Khan). Daulat agrees, even though Zaineb is a child. When his estranged wife Allah Rahki (Samiya Mumtaz; her character’s name translates as “God protects”) hears of this, it reminds her of her marriage at 15 and she makes a dash for freedom with her daughter that keeps viewers guessing. When a psychiatrist leaves his office in the middle of the day and disappears, hospital director Dr. Toby Green (Bruce Greenwood) interrupts his Christmas vacation to interview the last patient who was with the missing doctor. That patient, Michael (played with hypnotic intensity by Xavier Dolan), seems disturbingly unconcerned with the day’s events. Instead, Michael leads Dr. Green on a twisting game of cat-and-mouse, each man vying for control. While Nurse Peterson (Giovanna Mezzogiorno) may vanish, too. Gradually, the secrets of the past and the present are revealed.—Dave Nuttycombe

ELEPHANT SONG
Charles Biname
Canada, 2014, 110 minutes, color
Bathed in the steely cold blues of a Canadian winter in 1966, Elephant Song offers a chilly look at trust, secrets, and truth. Director Biname gives us a tense psychological thriller that keeps viewers guessing. When a psychiatrist leaves his office in the middle of the day and disappears, hospital director Dr. Toby Green (Bruce Greenwood) interrupts his Christmas vacation to interview the last patient who was with the missing doctor. That patient, Michael (played with hypnotic intensity by Xavier Dolan), seems disturbingly unconcerned with the day’s events. Instead, Michael leads Dr. Green on a twisting game of cat-and-mouse, each man vying for control. While Nurse Peterson (Giovanna Mezzogiorno) may vanish, too. THE DARK HORSE
James Napier Robertson
New Zealand, 2014, 124 minutes, color
After a nervous breakdown, bipolar Maori man-child and former speed chess master Genesis Potini (a nearly unrecognizable Cliff Curtis, star of the upcoming “Walking Dead” spinoff “Cobalt”) decides the best way to give structure to his life is to coach a misfit band of local kids called the Eastern Knights to a regional chess championship. If the destination of this keenly observed underdog saga is comfortably familiar, the journey is anything but. “Gen” must fight his own demons as well as those of his unruly young charges and nephew Mana (James Rolleston, from the Kiwi hit Boy), who is about to be conscripted into his dad’s biker gang. Despite some situations and the casual use of confrontational language, The Dark Horse will be a revelation to anyone old enough to process mature themes and well on their way to developing a life-long love of chess.—Eddie Cockrell

FINDING GASTON
Patricia Perez
Peru/United States, 2014, 78 minutes, color and black & white
Peruvian superstar restaurateur Gaston Acurio is called an “icon for young people” in this mouth-watering documentary. He also is credited with turning cuisine into a social weapon and with bringing Peru out of chaos. Acurio seems more than happy accepting all this responsibility. He studied in Paris and then opened a posh restaurant in Peru. Gradually, he turned its menu from fancy French into local Peruvian cuisine. In addition to candid interviews with Acurio, we follow the chef on his travels as he meets with independent fishermen whose catches he relies on, mentors students at cooking schools, and supervises the construction of his own cooking academy. Acurio can dismiss an ill-recognized Cliff Curtis, star of the upcoming “Walking Dead” spinoff “Cobalt”) decides the best way to give structure to his life is to coach a misfit band of local kids called the Eastern Knights to a regional chess championship. If the destination of this keenly observed underdog saga is comfortably familiar, the journey is anything but. “Gen” must fight his own demons as well as those of his unruly young charges and nephew Mana (James Rolleston, from the Kiwi hit Boy), who is about to be conscripted into his dad’s biker gang. Despite some situations and the casual use of confrontational language, The Dark Horse will be a revelation to anyone old enough to process mature themes and well on their way to developing a life-long love of chess.—Eddie Cockrell

THE DINNER
Ivano de Matteo
Italy, 2014, 92 minutes, color
Two siblings and their wives meet regularly for a meal. All is regular, normal, and dull until one fateful night. Ivan de Matteo’s adaptation of Dutch writer Herman Koch’s sensational, international hit novel is a highly cinematic, dense, and unnerving thriller. De Matteo has transplanted the Amsterdam milieu of the book to Rome, where Paolo (Luigi Lo Cascio) and his wife Clara (Giovanna Mezzogiorno) have a 16-year-old son named Michele (Jacopo Olmo Mantovani). Michele is good friends with his cousin Benny (Rosabell Laurenti Sellers), with whom he frequently hangs out. When Michele and Benny go to a party one night and drink more than they can handle, they find their way home but something is clearly wrong and suddenly the families face an appalling moral dilemma. Carefully plotted, The Dinner is a sharp, intelligent, and enthralling psychological drama with brilliantly staged emotional explosions.—Various sources

8 29TH ANNUAL FILMFEST DC
AN EVENING WITH ANN HORNADAY, HOSTED BY ARCH CAMPBELL

No two film critics have done more to promote the cause of good cinema in Washington than Ann Hornaday and Arch Campbell. None have been more forthright and articulate in their assessments, or stronger advocates for film as a means of both edification and entertainment. For the first time, Ann Hornaday and Arch Campbell will share the stage and discuss the art form that drives their passion.

Ann Hornaday is the chief film critic at The Washington Post. She has written about film for thirty years for The Baltimore Sun, The Austin American-Statesman, The New York Times, and other publications. She was a finalist for the Pulitzer Prize in criticism in 2008.

Arch Campbell joined the Washington, DC International Film Festival board in 2015. He has reported on entertainment and culture since the 1970s as a staff member of WRC-TV News and WJLA-TV News. Winner of eight local Emmy Awards, he was selected as a Washingtonian of the Year in 2015.

This is a rare opportunity to hear from two very special people who continue to influence the cultural life of our city. You do not want to miss it.

FLOWERS

Jon Garaño, Jose Mari Goenaga

Spain, 2014, 99 minutes, color

Basque construction worker Beñat expresses his secret love for the unhappily married, childless Ane (Nagore Aramburu), the female administrator on his worksite. By sending her anonymous, immaculately composed flower bouquets once a week. When Beñat is unexpectedly killed in a car accident, the flowers stop and so does the only brightness in Ane’s life—but when she uncovers the truth about her secret admirer, Ane begins to leave her own elaborate flower bouquets at the site of Beñat’s death, once a week. This leads Beñat’s unhappy widow Lourdes and his busbody mother Tere (Itziar Aizpuru, star of For 80 Days) to learn there was more to their beloved Beñat than they thought they knew, and they resolve to learn the truth from the unsuspecting Ane. Flowers is a sensitive, character-driven film that demonstrates real compassion for its protagonists and delivers surprises along the way.—Miami International Film Festival

THE GLAMOUR BOYZ AGAIN: THE MIGHTY SPARROW AND LORD SUPERIOR ON THE HILTON ROOFTOP

Geoffrey F. Dunn

Republic of Trinidad and Tobago, 2014, 60 minutes, color

This charming documentary features a remarkable performance by two of Calypso’s most venerated figures, the Mighty Sparrow (Dr. Slinger Francisco) and Lord Superior (Andrew Marcano), as they jammed on the rooftop of the Hilton Hotel overlooking Port of Spain, Trinidad. Sparrow is celebrated as the “Calypso King of the World”; Superior is Calypso’s conscience and soul. Cut with intimate reminiscences by both musicians, whose friendship dates back 60 years, the rooftop collaboration is arguably Sparrow’s best-rendered acoustic performance ever recorded. In addition to the performance and interviews, the film includes rare archival footage and photographs, including various scenes from Carnival celebrations in the late 1940s and 1950s and street scenes shot throughout Trinidad and Tobago. Together, Sparrow and Superior take us back to a time, both musical and political, that is no more. Geoffrey Dunn’s earlier film, Calypso Dreams, won the FFDC 2003 Audience Award.

HAPPY TIMES

Luis Javier M. Henaine

Mexico, 2014, 80 minutes, color

“Not every love lasts forever...fortunately” is the telling tagline for Happy Times, a smart, offbeat comedy about how hard it is to end a romantic relationship. Mild-mannered cartoonist Max (Luis Arrieta) isn’t pleased with the way his life currently is going. He works as an illustrator at an ad agency simply for the money, and he just can’t break things off with Monica (Cassandra Ciangherotti), the overbearing girlfriend from hell. When he tries, despite his best efforts he can’t even get the words out; unfortunately, Monica assumes that he is proposing. Although it’s common to encounter films about looking for and embracing love, it’s rare to find a comedy about the dissolution of a relationship. What makes Happy Times stand out, and lends it considerable charm, is that it also acknowledges how contradictory human beings and their relationships can be.—Variety

A Hard Day

A thrilling, flawlessly executed neo-noir, South Korean director Kim Seong-hun’s A Hard Day follows its unlucky protagonist down a long and winding road littered with potential disaster. Called away from his mother’s funeral on police business, Detective Ko Gun-soo (Lee Sun-kyun) speeds along a wet highway, barely managing to avoid hitting a passing beagle and smashing into a human being instead. Panicked, Gun-soo makes a grievously questionable decision, setting in motion a string of events that push him deeper and deeper into a swamp of criminal activity. Seong-hun injects A Hard Day with ingenious twists and macabre comedy. The tragedy of Gun-soo’s mother’s death becomes a godsend when he realizes he can hide the pedestrian’s corpse in his mother’s casket. Full of wild detours, dead ends, and hairpin turns, the film stays hot on the heels of its hapless protagonist right up to the end of the line.—Toronto International Film Festival

In the Name of My Daughter

France, 2014, 116 minutes, color

Catherine Deneuve owns the screen in her seventh collaboration with director André Téchiné. Based on actual events, In the Name of My Daughter chronicles the high-stakes casino wars along the glamorous French Riviera in the 1970s. Deneuve, who teamed with Téchiné in the 1996 award-winner My Favorite Season, portrays Renée Le Roux, the grande dame of the struggling Palais de la Méditerranée, a hotel and casino targeted by mobsters. Her lawyer Maurice Agnelet (Guillaume Canet) at first seems to be her only ally, but when Mme. Le Roux’s daughter Agnès (Adèle Haenel, also seen in In the Name of My Daughter Cannes, 2014, 116 minutes, color

JAL
Girish Malik
India, 2013, 126 minutes, color

In this debut feature, the camera soars across the sun-drenched landscape of India’s Thar Desert. Coupled with an energetic and yearning soundtrack, Jal is a stunning cinematic experience. In the and desert, water is sacred. That’s why charismatic Bakka fancies himself a “water god.” As his village suffers through a long draught, Bakka relies on his faith to find water, using divining rods and what he insists are his natural talents. At first Bakka has enough success to support his boastful nature, but the gratitude of his village goes to his head. He dares to marry the chieftain’s daughter from the rival village, betraying the loyal Kayri and causing many larger problems. When a group of Europeans arrive with heavy machinery, intent on saving the local flamingo population, it is soon Bakka vs. the giant drill, Bakka vs. his own tribe, and Bakka vs. nature and the world.—Dave Nuttycombe

Thomas Cailley
France, 2014, 98 minutes, color

Winner of four awards at the Cannes Film Festival, Thomas Cailley’s charming feature debut sees two French teenagers in a sleepy coastal town honing their survival skills as they navigate love. Madeleine is a doomsday prepper. She spends every waking moment training to join the army, hoping it will help develop her apocalypse-readiness. Arnaud is still weighing his options for the next phase of life, but for now he’s taking up the mantle in the family construction business. He wins a chance to prove himself with a new construction project for clients whose daughter is none other than eccentric Madeleine. Thrown into the middle of her crazy training regimen, Arnaud can’t help but be fascinated by this strange creature and neglects his responsibilities to impress her. Love at First Fight is a fun, romantic comedy that defies convention and is not what you expect.—Dave Nuttycombe

REEL JAZZ
KEEP ON KEEPIN’ ON
Alan Hicks
USA, 2014, 84 minutes, color and black & white

A blind student and a teacher who is losing his sight combine for one of the most heartwarming documentaries of recent years. Clark Terry, who died in February, was a jazz legend, having mentored both Miles Davis and Quincy Jones among many others. Known for both the “happy sound” he coaxed from a trumpet and also his indefatigably joyful spirit, Terry was still teaching in his 90s, despite the ravages of diabetes. Virginia piano prodigy Justin Kauflin was a student—as was director Hicks, then a drummer. First-time director Hicks followed Kauflin and Terry for five years, capturing the struggles each man was dealing with (Kauflin’s stage fright; Terry’s failing health) and music’s inherent power to heal and inspire. Just as Kauflin’s skills are sharpened by the older man’s guidance, so, too, is Terry helped by how his student handles his own blindness.—Dave Nuttycombe

TRUST NO ONE
THE LIES OF THE VICTORS
Christoph Hochhäusler
Germany/France, 2014, 112 minutes, color

In the spirit of Alan J. Pakula’s classic The President’s Men, with a nod to House of Cards, Christoph Hochhäusler’s The Lies of the Victors updates the crusading journalist genre for the digital age. Omnipresent surveillance, computer hacking, and media manipulation are employed to both expose and keep secret all manner of political and industrial chicanery as German politicians and industrial barons race to comply (or not) with EU toxic waste regulations. Fabian (Florian David Fitz) is a star reporter for Die Woche (The Week), a glossy magazine famous for its exposés. Tipped that veterans returning from the war in Afghanistan are dying from chemical exposure, Fabian begins an investigation that causes uncomfortable ripples. Of course, Fabian has his own secrets, which often force him to pawn his vintage Porsche. The Lies of the Victors poses many questions about what trust means when lies become truth.—Dave Nuttycombe

LIVING IS EASY WITH EYES CLOSED
David Trueba
Spain, 2013, 108 minutes, color

In 1966, at the height of Beatlemania, John Lennon did the unthinkable. He cut his famous hair and went to Spain to shoot a movie, How I Won the War. That arcane footnote to musical history drives David Trueba’s charming film about a solitary Spanish teacher’s quest to meet Lennon and find the answers he knows are hidden in the musician’s songs. Antonio (Javier Cámara) uses Beatle song lyrics in class to teach his students English. When the teacher learns that his idol is just a drive across the country, he packs his notebook of questions and hits the road. Along the way, Antonio picks up two hitchhikers: Belén (Natalia de Molina), a young woman searching for her own answers, and 14-year-old Juanjo (Francisco Colomer), a dreamy artist fleeing his oppressive father. The trio’s adventures lead them to discover what they really need.—Dave Nuttycombe

LUNAFEST: SHORTS BY, FOR, AND ABOUT WOMEN

This season’s program of eight selected films will compel discussion, make you laugh, tug at your heartstrings, and motivate you to make a difference in your community. Incredibly diverse in style and content, LUNAFEST is united by a common thread of exceptional storytelling—by, for, and about women.

TRYOUTS

Susana Casares
USA, 14 minutes

Being a teenager isn’t easy, especially for Nayla, a Muslim American girl who wants to join her new high school’s cheerleading squad.

TITS

Louisa Bertman
USA, 5 minutes

Tits is a story about feminine exploration.

CHICA’S DAY

Susan Bejar
Spain, 10 minutes

Today is a girls’ day out and everything is allowed—but don’t forget that this is just a game.

LADY PARTS

Emily Fraser/Katherine Gorringe
USA, 6 minutes

In an industry dominated by men, Lady Parts Automotive brings a woman’s touch.

MISS TODD

Kristina Yee
UK, 13 minutes

In 1910 New York, Miss Todd works to understand the principles of flight, but she has more than gravity holding her down.

MARGARITA, WITH A STRAW

Shonali Bose
India, 2014, 100 minutes, color

Margarita, with a Straw, Shonali Bose’s riveting portrait of self-love and acceptance, challenges our cross-cultural perceptions of what it means to be differently labeled. Laila (Kalki Koechlin) is a bright Delhi University student and aspiring writer who has cerebral palsy. When her band’s handsome lead signer rejects her advances, the blow is tempered by her acceptance into New York University’s creative writing program. There, Laila finds herself emotionally and domestically entangled with Khanum (Sayani Gupta), a blind yet self-possessed Pakistani woman who disrupts Laila’s desire for normalcy, and with Jared (William Moseley), a fellow student who wholly embodies the Wall. It is 6:23 p.m. on a rainy Friday evening when a knock on the door of her quiet Tel Aviv apartment awakens Shir Lippin (Tamar Alkin), who has been napping while her husband Rami is walking the dog. A neighbor presents the pet; Rami has disappeared. What follows is a long night of the soul for the increasingly agitated and confused Shir, who welcomes a series of visitors to the flat. But writer-director Ruman has something far more diabolically familiar in store. Straight from its January world premiere at the Rotterdam festival, The Man in the Wall is also a showcase for cinematographer Ziv Berkovich’s daring takes and Nir Bar’s extraordinary Steadicam work.—Eddie Cockrell

JUSTICE MATTERS

MAIDAN
Sergei Loznitsa
Netherlands, 2014, 133 minutes, color

Like many overseas conflicts, the recent unrest in Ukraine is an abstract thing to those not directly involved: grainy news footage and complex political references with little or no context, which is why every country needs a Sergei Loznitsa, a Kiev-raised nonfiction and feature film director of uncommon visual acuity. His latest feature, Maidan (short-hand for the city square and the movement it spawned), is a series of physically static camera shots that are anything but, as the thousands of nameless heroes of the protest against pro-Russian Ukraine president Viktor Yanukoych that lasted from December 2013 to February 2014 stroll, sing, eat, sleep, and eventually fight against strict anti-protest laws and their well-armed enforcers. Thus the masses become the protagonist in a rigorous, vitally strict anti-protest laws and their well-armed enforcers. Thus

ONE FOR THE ROAD
Jack Zagha Kababie
Mexico, 2014, 93 minutes, color

Pedro’s prized possession is a draft of the song “Yo” written on a napkin, with a special dedication to him by its author José Alfredo Jiménez, the legendary Ranchera singer. Pedro’s dying wish is to have the napkin delivered to the José Alfredo Jiménez Museum. His three octogenarian friends, Emiliano, Benito and Agustín, defy their families and band together for a road trip, determined to honor Pedro’s final request. Along the way, a series of poignant and comical adventures give them a renewed sense of purpose and possibility in their golden years. One for the Road has played at festivals from Moscow to São Paulo to great public acclaim, winning numerous audience awards. Veteran film and TV actors Eduardo Manzano, José Carlos Ruiz, and Luis Bayardo turn in playful and heartwarming performances in a film that highlights what is best in the human spirit, regardless of age.—Palm Springs International Film Festival

TOWN AND EAGLE AND THE DYING GIRL
Alfonso Gomez-Rejon
USA, 2015, 104 minutes, color

This film garnered the Grand Jury Prize and the U.S. Dramatic Audience Award at the recent Sundance Film Festival. Awkward Greg Gaines wants to coast through his senior year in high school as anonymously as possible. Averting social interactions like the plaque, Greg spends most of his time remaking wacky versions of classic movies with his only friend, Earl. Greg’s well-meaning mother intervenes, forcing him to befriend Rachel, a classmate who’s been diagnosed with leukemia. Both Greg and Rachel are surprised to find out that they actually like each other. Tentative at first, the unlikely duo becomes inseparable. When Rachel’s illness gets worse, Greg’s well-fortified world changes forever. Bristling with wit, director Alfonso Gomez-Rejon’s second feature is a poignant coming-of-age tale peppered with hilarious graphics and enchanting performances. Me and Earl and the Dying Girl will tickle your funny bone and remain in your heart.—Sundance Film Festival

THE MONK
The Maw Naing
Myanmar/Czech Republic, 2014, 93 minutes, color

The feature film debut by Myanmar poet, painter, and documentarian The Maw Naing, The Monk offers a meditative look at life inside a remote Buddhist monastery. Young novice Zawana has grown up within the crumbling temple walls but now feels the pull of the greater world outside. While days are filled with rituals and prayer, there are still iPods that tempt. And there is a young woman who is obviously interested in Zawana, but the stern Abbot scolds him, “I told you not to get too familiar with the village women. Such interactions damage a monk.” Indeed, the Abbot also complains to the workers repairing the monastery not to sing. As other novices run to catch the boat to the big city and the Abbot falls ill, Zawana is faced with a life-defining decision: to remain a monk or give himself to the world.—Dave Nuttycombe

Before the three male students found her in a narrow alleyway, life draining from her broken body, Huang, Lin, and Yeh had never laid eyes on Hsia Wei-chiao. In fact, despite their going to the same Taipei high school, the boys don’t even know each other. But over the course of Chang Jung-chi’s engrossing mystery thriller Partners in Crime, the three of them come to know Wei-chiao better than anyone. The question is, can they uncover the real story behind her death? Jung-chi brings his preternatural storytelling talent to bear in this film that deepens with intrigue at every turn. Alert to the many ways that adolescents can become trapped by their own loneliness and adults can become blinded by their own trite responses to youth-related crises, the film takes us into the hearts and souls of its characters, where secrets fester and truths wait to be revealed.—Toronto International Film Festival

PAN! Our Music Odyssey combines documentary footage of hundreds of musicians competing at the 50th annual Panomania steel drum festival in Trinidad with evocatively produced historical re-enactments detailing the origin of what the filmmakers call “the most amazing sound invented in the 20th century.” The pan drum, or steelpan, certainly does produce a joyous sound, although it can take 120 members, we see the instrument’s reach. Musicians of the surviving originators of the pan movement recall its history and musical style. Artists from around the world discuss the pan drum’s allure. Philippe Muyl
China/France, 2013, 100 minutes, color

In this ravishingly beautiful movie, veteran French filmmaker Philippe Muyl takes us on a Chinese road trip through spectacular mountain villages to discover a bucolic way of life. After two decades living in Beijing, where he moved to allow his son to go to university, Zhigen (Baotian Li) resolves it is time to keep the promise he made to his wife before she died and return to his native village—bringing with him the bird that has been his constant companion. Unexpectedly, he is asked to bring his granddaughter Ren Xing (Xin Yi Yang) along with him. Brought up in the lap of luxury, Ren Xing is more familiar with iPads than trekking through forests and rice paddies. Meanwhile back in Beijing, her materialistic parents start to reevaluate what life means to them.—Palm Springs International Film Festival

Ferdinando Vicentini Orniani
Italy, 2013, 106 minutes, color

It all started with a sip of wine, a very special Marzemino. After that first ruby drop hit his tongue, everything changed for shy bank clerk Giovanni Cuttin. With his senses feverishly awakened, Giovanni quits his day job to embark on a life as a powerful wine writer, in a classic Faustian arrangement. Unfortunately, as foretold by a mysterious gentleman, Giovanni’s rise to fame will include a mad thirst for more expensive and exquisite wines, turning a formerly honest man and loving husband into a thief, a liar…and possibly a murderer? Matched with the genius of Italian winemakers, Giovanni’s very soul is on the line.—Miami International Film Festival

REWINED
Ferdinando Vicentini Orniani
Italy, 2013, 106 minutes, color

It all started with a sip of wine, a very special Marzemino. After that first ruby drop hit his tongue, everything changed for shy bank clerk Giovanni Cuttin. With his senses feverishly awakened, Giovanni quits his day job to embark on a life as a powerful wine writer, in a classic Faustian arrangement. Unfortunately, as foretold by a mysterious gentleman, Giovanni’s rise to fame will include a mad thirst for more expensive and exquisite wines, turning a formerly honest man and loving husband into a thief, a liar…and possibly a murderer? Matched with the genius of Italian winemakers, Giovanni’s very soul is on the line.—Miami International Film Festival

TAP WORLD
Dean Hargrove
USA, 2014, 72 minutes, color

Tap dancers from around the world were invited to submit their videotaped tales of inspiration, struggle, and triumph. Those stories are collected in Tap World, a high-energy survey of flying feet. The film traces the history, evolution, and influence of tap dancing and is steeped in the exuberance and accomplishment of its talented performers.

From South African gumboot dancing to the barefooted Kathak dance of India, we witness some of the world’s best. Included are the acknowledged greats of tap: Baltimore’s own “Buster” Brown, the pioneering Jimmy Slyde, teacher and Tony Award-winner Henry LeTang, and the gone-too-soon Gregory Hines. And then there’s Joshua Johnson, who tapped on subways to earn college tuition, and dancer Evan Ruggiero, who lost a leg to cancer but carried on like his inspiration, Peg Leg Bates. “Rhythm is the music of life,” says one dancer, and Tap World proves the point.—Various sources

THAT SUGAR FILM
Damon Gameau
Australia, 2014, 90 minutes, color

Australian actor and director Damon Gameau had been living a healthy lifestyle for a while—or so he thought. With a child on the way, Gameau decided to launch a Super Size Me-style campaign to see what would happen when he consumed the 40 teaspoons of sugar a day that most people eat. The irony is that much of the sugar we consume comes not from junk food and candy but rather from so-called “low-fat” products, the items that we think are actually good for us. For example, a seemingly healthful fruit smoothie can contain 34 teaspoons of sugar in the form of high-fructose syrup. As Gameau continues his quest, we watch his health suffer quickly; only 18 days later, he has liver problems. That Sugar Film uses highly inventive graphics, like having talking heads dispense wisdom from boxes on grocery shelves, to tell its important story.—Dave Nutcombe

THEY DIE BY DAWN
Jeymes Samuel
United Kingdom, 2013, 51 minutes, color

Four real-life outlaws meet up in the town of Langston, Oklahoma to play a risky game. The winner of their shootout gets their collected bounty: $80,000. The losers? Well, the losers will “die by dawn.” Jeymes Samuel’s new short film features hip hop star Erykah Badu as Stagecoach Mary and Michael K. Williams as Nat Love. Also starring are Rosario Dawson, Isaiah Washington, and Giancarlo Esposito. The twist? Every character in the film is a historical figure who actually lived in the Old West. Oh, and all but three characters are African-American. According to Samuel, it was important that all of the characters were real so that if kids watch the film they can go straight to history books and learn how the West was really won (that is, with men and women of all races represented). “Hollywood may have overlooked their story,” says Samuel, “but we haven’t.”—Various sources

JUSTICE MATTERS
THIS IS MY LAND
Tamara Erde
France/Israel/Palestine/Poland, 2014, 93 minutes, color

How do the Palestinian and Israeli educational systems teach the history of their respective nations and their intertwined conflict? Israeli director Tamara Erde set out to answer this question is a provocative, complex, and fascinating question a few years after completing her army service. Despite the fact that the respective education ministries are leery about allowing teachers to speak on the topic, Erde was able to arrange filming at a number of Israeli, Palestinian, and mixed schools, observing different teacher strategies and various responses from the children. She also spoke to educational researchers on both sides. There’s a good bit of pessimism from children and adults alike, but the film also shows good people trying to build curricula and teach responsibly. “I’ve kind of forgotten what it means,” says a 17-year-old Israeli when asked to define “shalom” (peace). In these troubled lands, this sad amnesia is an unfortunate truth.—Eddie Cockrell

TODAY

Reza Mirarimi

Iran, 2014, 88 minutes, color

During Tehran taxi driver Younes’ (Prvis Prastui) lunch break, the distressed, clearly beaten, and pregnant Seddigeh (Soheila Golestan) collapses into his back seat, pleading to be taken to a second-rate hospital. Once there, Younes is presumed to be Seddigeh’s husband/father/lover and is castigated accordingly, an assumption he does nothing to correct. Why? This question is at the heart of director-editor Reza Mirarimi’s third feature to be submitted as Iran’s Best Foreign Language Film. As the neon-stabbed night goes on and Younes takes the criticism with a cryptic stoicism, this sparse, quiet, and ultimately profoundly compassionate film slowly reveals its secrets by virtue of a wise administrator (Shabnam Moghadami) and an intense bedside meeting between patient and Good Samaritan. Today is a deeply moving film that isn’t quickly dismissed or forgotten.—Eddie Cockrell

The Tribe

Myroslav Slaboshpytskiy

Ukraine, 2014, 130 minutes, color

A wild success at this year’s Cannes festival—where it garnered three Critics’ Week awards, including the Grand Prix—Myroslav Slaboshpytskiy’s feature debut, The Tribe, is an unforgettably original drama set entirely in the world of the deaf. When he arrives at a boarding school for the deaf and mute, teenage Sergey (Grigoriy Fesenko) is greeted by more than the usual challenges of integration. Put through the requisite initiation rites, he proves himself worthy and is brought under the protective wing of the school’s gang leader. Balancing regular activities of bribery, robbery, and prostitution with youthful proclivities, Sergey’s newfound clique operates along the fine lines between business and pleasure, adolescence and adulthood. But as soon as he moves up the ranks to become a pimp, Sergey compromises his rapid ascent by falling in love with one of the tribe’s escorts, setting off a tragic series of events.

UNLIKELY HEROES

Peter Luisi

Switzerland, 2014, 94 minutes, color

Separated from her husband, missing her children, and stalled at work, Sabine (Esther Gemsh) feels lost until she stumbles into a center for asylum seekers. These disparate people from around the world have come to Switzerland in search of refuge. They too are in limbo, awaiting the state’s decision on their future. Sabine offers to organize the annual Christmas play, but getting the group to cooperate isn’t easy. The asylum seekers hardly speak German, so misunderstandings abound. As “Elvis” (Karim Rahoma) the Muslim outsider snarls, “I didn’t come to Switzerland to do theater.” Sabine’s choice to perform the William Tell story, in effect turning the Swiss national hero over to foreigners, proves scandalous. With everything against her, Sabine persists anyway, because despite all their differences the group may just become a surrogate family.—Dave Nuttycombe

THE WATER DIVINER

Russell Crowe

Australia, 2014, 111 minutes, color

The highest-grossing Australian film of 2014, the ambitious and affecting The Water Diviner is star Russell Crowe’s directorial debut. He plays to his solid strengths as the farmer-artisan of the title, struggling with life after his three boys are lost in World War I’s battle at Gallipoli. When his wife succumbs to her grief, he travels to Turkey in search of their remains or at least some facts of their fate. During his stay in Constantinople, he befriends hotelier Ayse (Olga Kurylenko) and clashes not only with a pair of Turkish war vets (Yilmaz Erdogan and Cem Yilmaz, director and co-star of FFDC 2002 hit Vizontele) but with a stuffy British officer (Jai Courtney) as well. What he finds, in his journey to the truth, is both life-affirming and inspirational.—Eddie Cockrell

THE TREATMENT

Hans Herbots

Belgium, 2014, 125 minutes, color

Based on the book by Mo Hayder, who also co-wrote the script, director Hans Herbots’ The Treatment is a complex and dark puzzle that becomes more and more tense with every plot twist. Inspector Nick Cafmeyer (Geert Van Rampelberg) is a haunted man still living alone in his childhood home. His childhood was scarred when his younger brother was abducted, never to be seen again. The prime suspect (a suitably creepy Johan van Assche), who was never charged with the crime, returns to taunt Nick as more little boys are kidnapped. Nick’s investigation uncovers a pedophile network in which every man he meets is a likely suspect. Nick’s hopes for redemption, justice, and even simple answers are tested again and again the deeper he goes into this dangerous underground world.—Dave Nuttycombe

Tigers

Danis Tanovic

India/France/UK, 2014, 90 minutes, color

In rural Pakistan, an ambitious pharmaceutical rep (Bollywood superstar Emraan Hashmi) lands a job with baby formula juggernaut Lastavita and is sent into the field with other “tigers” to seduce doctors and hospital staff into stocking the brand and counseling new mothers against breast-feeding. He’s good at his job and rises quickly, only to quit abruptly and blow the whistle when he discovers the formula, mixed with the dirty water on which local families subsist, is killing infants. Danis Tanovic, director of a segment in the omnibus 11’09”01—September 11 (FFDC 2003) as well as the 2001 Foreign Language Oscar®-winning No Man’s Land, has ingeniously incorporated the framing device of a Skype session with an apprehensive producer (Danny Huston) and his lawyers, intent on telling this true story, to demonstrate the fear in which big pharma is held. All this tiger can do is try to keep from being silenced.—Eddie Cockrell
